Go-Go Gadgets – For your Lunchbox

Welcome back everyone!

To kick-off this school year, let’s talk about something we now have to think about every day... packing lunches! I am entering new territory this year as our son starts preschool and needs a mid-morning snack to take with him. Although it is not yet packing a full-out lunch, I am now faced with the task of mastering a fun, tasty, easy, and nutritious meal... all while also managing a crazy morning routine! So here are some of the gadgets that I will be trying in our lunchboxes as we start the school year. I will keep you posted on what works, and what flops!

1. Ice Packs - Food safety is always a primary concern. We have everything from a plain-ol' blue rectangular ice pack to those with designs (soccer balls, monkey faces, etc.). It doesn’t have to be fancy, as long as it’s in there!

2. Bento Box - I’ve got to tell you, my geeky dietitian side loves seeing a well-packed Bento box! These lunchbox containers offer individual compartments for each item and help keep portions in check. If you don’t have a Bento box, use any square container and separate the food items with silicone baking cups.

3. Skewers - Even as an adult, something about eating your food off of a stick makes it more fun! Place meats, cheeses, fruits, and vegetables on a stick for something different than a plastic baggie. Another fun idea is to cut a sandwich wrap into sections and place those on a skewer stick. Wooden skewers are available at any grocery store, or for littler fingers, you can use a straw.

4. Wide-Mouth Thermos - Perfect for sending your kids to school with a hot lunch! Use for leftovers, soups, steamed vegetables, oatmeal, etc. It opens a whole new realm of possibilities. TIP: Before putting food into the thermos, pour in some boiling water and let it sit for a few minutes (then discard). This will get the thermos activated and ready to keep the food hot until lunch.

5. Teamwork - Ok, so this one isn’t technically a “gadget” (at all) but one of my favorite tips for packing a successful lunch is to pack it with your kids’ help! Ask them to participate in selecting what goes into their lunch each day and recruit their help in preparing the food and packing it up.

I’d love to hear any of your own tried-and-true tips and tricks for packing a healthy and successful lunch!

Here’s to a happy, healthy school year ahead!
